A fabulous fun night

The Loosely Woven music night at the Baptist Hall on April 14 was a joy to attend.

When this group of musicians return to Dungog next year, I thoroughly recommend people attend, as these talented singers and instrumentalists certainly give value for money, as well as lots of fun.

They are not to be missed!

The musical repertoire was wide and appealing: folk songs, funny songs, protest songs, jazz songs and traditional songs, all chosen to entertain all ages and tastes.

Audience participation was encouraged and we sang along joyfully, tapping our feet to the catchy tunes.

Some of the children even danced.

Loosely Woven is a troupe of Sydney musicians who perform about four shows in country areas each year, just for the fun of it.

In Dungog, they performed with the talented Dungog Warblers, enthusiastic local singers.

The concert also featured two compositions by our very own Helen Rubeli, with Helen accompanying vocalists on the piano.

So when you see the next Loosely Woven concert advertised, get your tickets quick smart.

You'll have one of the best nights ever in Dungog town.
